

Let's Get Curious

This activity will allow members to:

- Participate in thoughtful and respectful club discussions.
- Analyze, problem-solve and brainstorm how the community will be impacted by their service project.
- Connect with their fellow club members.
- Increase confidence and team-building.

Materials needed:

- The flip-chart pages from the previous activity
- White board or blank flip-chart paper
- Markers

How to lead this activity:

Once the club completes the charting exercise, members should think about the impact their club might have. This discussion will help them think about each type of service need. The club secretary should take notes on the flip charts or a white board.

1. Post the flip-chart pages from the charting activity from the previous meeting where everyone can see them. Members will discuss each service need as a possible club cause.
2. Make sure every member has the Accountable Talk handout before the discussion starts. (During the discussion, club officers and advisors should make sure that every member uses accountable talk.)
3. Club officers should lead a discussion about each service need. (For time's sake, the club can choose to discuss only the most popular service need categories.) Here are a few questions you might use:
 - a. What kinds of service projects would help meet this type of service need?
 - b. Who might benefit from a service project?
 - c. What is already being done for this service need? What organizations in our community are doing it?
 - d. Who could we contact to help us learn more?
 - e. Can our club make a significant impact on this service need?
